Principal's Message

MR. G. M. NEWFIELD

MR. A. ROMANOW

Look at the pages of a book. Notice that the actual printed matter leaves quite a margin. Indeed, if you take the trouble to investigate this statement statistically you will find that only about one-third of the space in a book is devoted to the printing while the rest is margin.

So it is with our lives. There are 168 hours in a week out of which most people these days actually work about 40 hours. This leaves 128 hours. After sleeping and eating there is still much time left. That is the margin. The use we make of that margin has a lot to do with our success in life.

The first use you should make of margin time is to plan what you will do with your life. The world today needs people who don't have to be told everything they should do — people who figure things out for themselves. Imagination, initiative, self-starting, and considered actions are the characteristics of the person who will not be replaced by automation — a push button.

Our inmost thoughts we can conceal,
Our motives none can see;
But future action will reveal
Our dreams, our worth, our destiny.

How are you using your margin? Do you have a purpose, a plan, a program, a dream, a magnificent obsession? How much of your marginal time are you using to shape yourself into the kind of person you really want to be? Remember: it's your life; it's your time! Give heed to your margin! Plan it carefully! Use it well!

Here are a few thoughts to ponder when you consider your margin. They have helped me. I hope they may serve to guide you.

1. The harder you work, the luckier you get.
2. Happiness spills on you when you are carrying it to others.
3. It is what we do that counts, not what we know or believe.
4. Plan your work, then work your plan.
5. Any hill is too high for a poor climber.
6. It's nice to be important, but it is much more important to be nice.
7. Ability is measured by what you finish — not by what you begin.
8. Don't just fill a space — fill a place.
